NAVY DAY THOUGHTS.

THERE are men and women in the United States, and perhaps some in Hancock county, who consider that every dollar spent on the American navy is money thrown away. For them to-day, Navy Day, October 27th, is useless and absurd.

Certainly, we would prefer to see the money spent on guns and ships used for other purposes but, so long as other nations maintain navies the United States should be able to support her own. Richest among the nations of the earth this republic has been modest enough in its naval establishment. Certainly, in scrapping ships and agreeing to control navies, we have given abundant evidence of a patriotic spirit.

Disarmament by regulation is a splendid principle, now in effect, theoretically, through the 5-5-3 ratio established at London. However, at no time has the United States availed itself of the treaty right to build up a navy equal to Great Britain's and we have permitted the Japanese to construct a fleet practically the equal of our own.

However, there are ominous portents in the Far East where Japan, with a widely different culture, pursues a militaristic policy and talks, through officials, of leading the Asiatics in breaking down the domination of the white race. Certainly, we should take note of the notice, already given, that Japan will insist upon a larger navy than accorded her by the treaty.

No sensible American desires conflict with any nation but no patriotic American is willing that this nation shall be unable to defend itself. No navy has ever produced the curse of militarism or been able for many days, to dominate the domestic affairs of any country. A strong navy is a guarantee of protection that the United States can not afford to be without.

WOULD ADOPT CODE PERMANENTLY.

EVERYBODY recognizes that the N. R. A. program involves a revolutionary change in the management of our industrial organization. It seeks to put into effect some method of intelligent planning and cooperation rather than the old cut-throat competition with its resultant wastes to all. At a meeting of the New Hampshire Manufacturers Association the officer of a large company said that the cotton textile code should be made permanent.

This officer, Robert Amory said: "Thus far the results of the cotton industry code have been so hopeful that I feel every bit of our energy and effort should be devoted to making permanent this general principle of industrial agreements entered into openly, while watched over by the government and representatives of the consumer and of the worker. I hope that the present emergency measure which expires in June, 1935, will be prolonged by national legislation. This seems the best and soundest course."

AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK

UNDER the auspices of the American Legion. The Parent-Teacher Association, and the public school people American Education Week will be observed throughout the Nation during the week beginning Monday, November 6th. At this time the people of the country are requested to give especial attention to the schools by visiting them, making speeches, by mass meetings and in any other way that will tend to make the school a better place for our children.

State Superintendent of Education says that in Mississippi we already have a fine appreciation on the part of the public for the public schools but in many counties there will be mass meetings in one or more places in the county in the interest of a better understanding of just what is most needed now to help the schools carry on in the best possible way in these times. We hope that every citizen of the state will do something within the next month out of the ordinary to improve the general school situation.

HUEY LONG NO ASSET FOR MOVIES.

A NEW ORLEANS newspaper some time since reported that Senator Long had journeyed from office to office of newspaper syndicates in New York City with a view of contracting for a daily short spiel a la Will Rogers on the front pages of daily newspapers and was turned down completely.

Now comes the story from the film capital on the Pacific Coast that Long is neither wanted in movies. Louella Parsons, recognized writer from Hollywood says that Huey Long may be great copy for the newspapers, but he isn't what the doctor prescribes for the screen. Warner Brothers, who sent William Rankin East to interview the much-publicized Senator, have decided against filming the colorful and dynamic Louisiana. Reason is that a story picturing certain published incidents might not find favor and might even end in a libel suit. On the other hand, a romantic story falsely sentimental would not make much headway with an American public that demands its hero be pictured without benefit of a halo.

The NRA, according to Gen. Johnson is an experiment. Let's help it work in the hope that it will bring about better days.

THE NEW ERA IN HOME BUILDING.

FROM the standpoint of today's homebuilder, the depression has produced one good result.

According to a news item from Seattle, building has acquired a new status in the last three years. Architects and contractors agree that it will never go back to the old basis. The principle change has been in the degree of discrimination developed by the prospective builder and buyer. He may be buying a very inexpensive place—but he has learned to demand beauty and artistry and good workmanship and materials. It is doubtful, as the news item observes, if the old jack-knife carpenter and the contractor who threw up a number of jerry-built homes as a speculation, will have a place in the new order.

What is true in Washington is true, to a greater or lesser degree, elsewhere.

There has never been a better time for building a new home or rebuilding the old one—never a time when we could get so much, both in materials and in expert advice, as at present. The buyer's market still exists—the price rises that have occurred recently are as nothing to the price rises that are coming.

Bay St. Louis and vicinity are on the verge of a building revival. Many homes have become almost obsolete, many beyond intelligent repair and the natural conclusion is to the effect that many new dwellings will be seen in numerous evidence.

Local dealers and contractors and architects (for do not build without the aid of one), can tell the whole story. Call on them—get in on the ground floor and new era of home building.

Our subscription records show a lot of names whose owners will fail to get their paper next month unless they pry loose a few shackles and send them to the main office.

GOV. CONNER AND TAXES.

IT is apparent an added sales tax will be one of the results of Mississippi's next legislative session. Governor Conner's ambition is to practically wipe away the ad valorem tax as this appears the only way to give the tax-burdened property owner relief. And no other way is apparent than to add to the already successful sales tax.

The sales tax has had many converts since it has gone into practical usage, but many remain opposed on the same general principles as when the war against it was bitterly fought at Jackson. The fact much of the State's debt has been wiped away is an incentive to further exploration into this manner of raising money for the State, a method by which everyone shares.

The ad valorem tax falls on a certain few and has been growing more burdensome each year until now it practically amounts to confiscation. This is proven by the published delinquent tax sales of city, county and State.

It is certain Gov. Conner is honest in his purpose, that he is going to give the ad valorem taxpayer some sort of relief if not a remedy. Of course, we will as a whole pay the tax, but under a different name and in a different guise. But a relief to the ad valorem tax-payer will in measure be received with acclaim and in benefit not to be overestimated. Times and conditions change and people and their custom must change accordingly.

The idea that great geniuses just happen along may be sound, but the average citizen amounts to about as much as he works to become, and no more.

PROGRESSIVE WAVELAND.

OUR municipal neighbor and sister city as well is getting ready for the great revival about to happen. And, again, Waveland, is fully aware of the advantages of the completion of La-Miss. highway short-cut and getting ready for the new era to subsequently dawn with New Orleans twenty-five miles closer to this section and the advantage of the all-paved road connecting the big city with the gulf coast.

In addition to other improvements, including the beginning of a new white way for the beach boulevard, Waveland will vote Saturday on a $40,000.00 bond issue. To raise money to meet an allotment from federal funds with which to hard-surface its streets. Waveland will receive abundant federal money for this work at a rate of only 5 1-2 per cent, complete the projected improvement and incidentally supply work to many at this particular time.

Waveland is not only to take care of the present but is looking ahead, and it might be well for other cities to follow likewise.

It is said more dwellings have been built in Waveland this year than any other one town of its size. In addition the remodeling of its large mercantile establishment into a substantial city-like place of business is an indication of considerable meaning.

JAMES RESTER.

DEATH of James Rester, substantial farmer and resident of Hancock county for over a half century, was noted in these columns last week and is a distinct loss to the ranks of citizenry of the county.

Mr. Rester was of that type constituting the permanent and constructive class that go to make for the very existence of a community and his loss naturally is a distinct one to the county. There are too few men and women of this splendid type and we can ill afford to lose them. Only recently The Echo took occasion to mention of the number of outstanding citizens of Hancock who have passed away within a comparative short time and how great a loss in the aggregate as well as individually. Mr. Rester was in this class.

His loss is deeply deplored. However, he lived an exemplary life and six fine sons, worthy of their father's name, will carry on precepts of their father for better neighbors and citizens. May their number increase and may they live long. James Rester has left an imperishable heritage to his children.

MERELY THEORETICAL

By GEORGE E. SCHILLING
(For The Sea Coast Echo)

FOREIGN TRADE.

Dr. Harold G. Moulton, Brookings Institution, which is a very scholarly, intellectual and exclusive institution indeed, has renewed, with reference to cotton, a suggestion originally made by the Honorable Alfred Smith, former Democratic candidate for president. Dr. Moulton's idea is that we should cancel some of the so-called war debts on condition that Europe buy some of our surplus cotton.

The philosophy of this brilliant suggestion is not new. In a comic opera of some thirty years ago the German comedian had a bill that he was trying to collect from a nobleman. When the debtor explained that he would not, or could not, pay, the bill the comedian made the same offer now proposed by the very distinguished gentleman from the East. "Well, if you can't pay me, den vill you let me work it out?"

The American people seem to be singularly dumb about foreign trade and, as Robt. Fitzsimmons, the noted pugilist, once remarked of his opponents, "the bigger they come, the harder they fall." The word "trade" itself ought to be a bar to much of the loose talking, writing and acting done by our great statesmen, publicists and financial giants, but its meaning seems to be entirely overlooked. A little economic history may help to explain our general goofiness on the subject. We have been trying to fit nineteenth century thinking to twentieth century facts.

Until the great war, less than twenty years ago, this was a debtor country, having borrowed money to develop the country and build our immense transportation and industrial plant. (Of course the "money" received was mostly in the form of various goods and services received by America, not in the form of coin.) We had at first an "unfavorable balance of trade," which meant that we bought more than we sold, just like a man starting in business, paying for the excess imports with borrowed money. Then we changed to a "favorable balance" which was necessary to provide credits (money if you prefer) to pay interest on foreign loans, as well as tourists' expenditures, immigrants' remittance and financial and shipping services.

The war changed this all about in five years. We paid back our loans and began lending money to Europe. When we entered the war the government borrowed money from its own citizens and loaned it to Europeans to pay for their immense purchases in this country, not only of war materials, but also of supplies for their civilian population. Our associates made us pay cash for our purchases from them; but they bought from us on credit, giving us their I. O. U's for their bills. The amounts, as finally adjusted, total something over ten thousand million dollars, which you and I will have to help pay, with interest. Now the Europeans declare that we are a lot of contemptible Shylocks, that they do not owe us the money, and they are not going to pay us, and that's that.

Our government quit loaning money to Europe a year or so after the war was over, and Wall and Broad streets took up the burden, at a very nice profit to some of the big banks and bankers. We were shipping out more goods than we were buying, loaning our customers money to pay for them, and kidding ourselves that we were making a profit out of the deals. They had some fine words to cover up the bad jokes on America. "Disposal of surplus production" was a great favorite. It was easy to make that phrase sound as though there were some sense in it. "Favorable balance of trade," an idea exploded by Adam Smith in 1776, the year of the Declaration of Independence, was another.

Try it on a small scale, so you can see it more easily. Your grocer can increase his business enormously by merely giving credit to everybody in town, whether they can, or will, pay him back or not; but he can't make much of a profit that way, even though he does increase both sales and employment as long as his own money holds out. Business is business, on a large scale as on a small scale. There is no trick of high finance that will save the situation when bills are uncollectible, although there are many tricks to postpone the crash and to make a private profit from the deals. The great secret of success in all business is in prompt collections, as our best business men know.

"Trade" means barter—the exchange of one thing for another. It is not trade when a person, or a country, gives away goods without getting anything in return except worthless promises to pay. Gifts may be noble and/or generous, but they are not financially profitable.

The twentieth century paradox is that we must learn to consume more in order to sell more. The British understood this in the days of their supremacy. They imported more food and raw materials than they exported of manufactured goods, and grew rich on an apparent "unfavorable balance of trade." We have their lesson to learn, although it will be far more difficult for us because we are so tremendously rich already that we need to buy very little. Our real problem is not to produce and to export, but to distribute our surplus wealth and use our own riches.

"BUY NOW IS U. S. SLOGAN FOR NEW NATIONAL CAMPAIGN"

New Phase of N. R. A. Is Urged by Roosevelt and Johnson.

The "Buy Now" campaign on a nation-wide scale has the enthusiastic endorsement of President Roosevelt and National Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

That such a movement is timely can be testified by hundreds of thousands of merchants the country over who will tell you that citizens in every town and city have been skimping along, on "as little as possible" for the last three, or four years and, as a consequence, business has been on the limp.

Industry and trade, represented by the manufacturers and merchants, have done their part by signing agreements to give their employees fair wages and shorter hours of labor. Unless the consumers of the country now do their part, these manufacturers and merchants will be unable to continue under their respective codes.

We have in Bay St. Louis merchants who have signed agreements, at great sacrifice to themselves, to pay higher wages and employ more workers. That the people of this community should support these merchants with their business stands apparent.

General Johnson urges the housewives of the country to realize that now is the time to buy because they will not only save money by buying while prices are low, but because every dollar spent now is helping to keep the wage earner in her family on a payroll.

The average family has been waiting for "better times" to arrive before needed purchases are made. General Johnson asserts, "Better times are here. There is a new confidence abroad in the land. Men are going back to work. Industry is bringing into the market improved products held back for these better times. Merchants are restocking their shelves and warehouses."

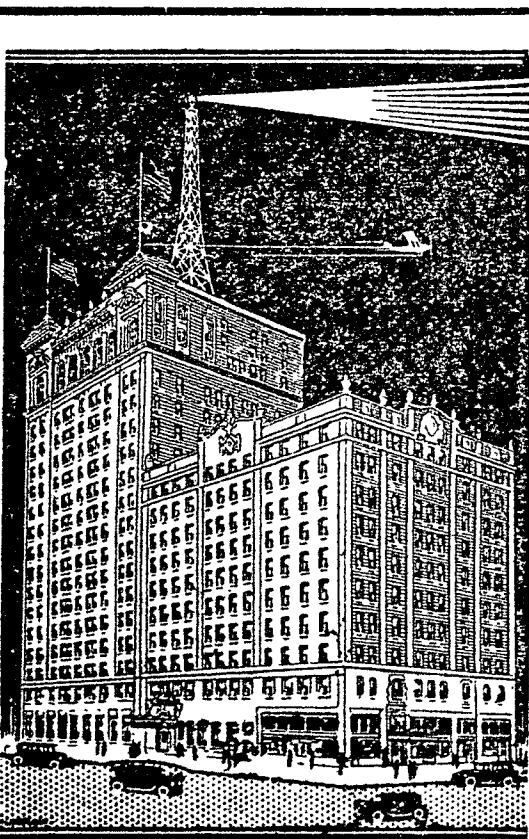

Then he adds a word to the wise. "Better times always mean higher prices. Now is the time to buy for purely selfish reasons. Prices are going up. Buying now is an investment."

The Echo urges the citizens of this territory to enter wholeheartedly into the spirit of this campaign. Visit the stores of Bay St. Louis and give the local merchants a chance to supply your needs. If they cannot meet the fair competition of big city merchants or mail order houses they will not expect your trade.

Already the effects of this "Buy Now" campaign is being felt here and all over the nation. NRA officials feel that the most serious obstacle in the way of returning prosperity will have been removed if the citizens of the nation begin supplying their immediate needs, thus placing money into freer circulation. Increased business for the employers mean that they will be able to pay higher wages and employ more help and this, in turn will be reflected in improved conditions for every citizen in the country.

Keeping Faith..

WHEN we organized the Mississippi Power Company in 1925 our earliest statements of policy included the dedication of our resources to supplying Mississippi with abundant, equitably priced power which would attract industry and lift the burden of labor in home, farm and factory.

How well this policy has been carried out is shown by a decrease of 6.4c per KWH or 50.8% in the average price paid for residential energy by our customers from 1925 to 1932 and by an increase in average residential usage from 274 KWH per year in 1926 to 576 KWH in 1932, or 110%.

At the same time rural lines have been built, and industry has followed in the path of ample power.

In announcing another general residential rate reduction effective with Nov. 1, 1933 billing, we continue to keep faith with and in Mississippi.

The new Residential Electric Rate follows:

8c per KWH for first 25 KWH per month
5c per KWH for next 25 KWH per month
4c per KWH for next 40 KWH per month
2c per KWH for next 110 KWH per month
1c per KWH for all over 200 KWH per month

Above are net rates—Minimum Bill $1.00 per month.

These new rates bring a reduction into every city, town and hamlet which we serve. They mark our continued purpose to conduct the operations of this Company so as to warrant the fullest possible use of electric energy by every consumer.

B. E. EATON
President.

These new low rates apply to every residential user, large or small. At low prices now available electric energy can be used freely for every home application.

WITH THE MOVIES AND FILM FOLKS

(For the Sea Coast Echo)

NEITHER snow or rain nor gloom of night will prevent Twentieth Century from finishing the seven pictures now in production, so it says. The first of these is to be "Broadway Through a Keyhole," Walter Winchell's story of New York's night-after-night life.

Leslie Howard has finished his part in a British film and will return to New York and Hollywood shortly to begin work on "British Agent," for First National.

A second foreign honor has been bestowed on Walt Disney for his Mickey Mouse and Silly Symphony cartoons. The Academy of Fine Arts in Buenos Aires has awarded him a diploma of honor. The first distinction came from Havana.

Another comic strip character is to make his appearance on the screen. "Joe Palooka," Ham Fisher's booby prize-fighter, is to be the first Reliance picture for release on United Artists' present schedule. The cast includes Jimmy Durante, Lupe Velez, Stuart Erwin, Robert Armstrong and others.

Kay Francis's next picture is to be "Mandalay," in which she will be supported by Ricardo Cortez. With is Warner Brothers contract ended, George Arliss has returned from England to begin work on "The House of Rothschild," for Twentieth Century. Following this, he will appear in "Sentenced."

When studios wish to discipline unruly stars they threaten to place them in Western pictures. Sally Eilers, who refused a role in "Jimmy and Sally," was assigned to lead in "Heir to the Hoarh" and the studio makes no secret of its reason for placing her in the part.

Of the 3,000 youngsters who tried out for screen careers at Universal's screen school during the summer, five were signed for contracts. These were Lois January, Leonore Kingston, Peggy Terry, James Scott and Dean Benton.

Emil Ludwig, who was engaged by Warner Brothers to write "Napoleon" for Edward G. Robinson, is hard at work in Hollywood.

James Cagney's latest endeavor is "The Finger Man." The assisting cast includes Mae Clarke, Leslie Fenton, Margaret Lindsay, Raymond Hatton, Marjorie Gateson and Bull Montana.

Colleen Moore will next appear in "Success Story," by John Howard Layson.

Fox's film, "365 Nights in Hollywood," written by Jimmy Starr, is said to treat Hollywood on the screen as frankly as the community has been treated in the paragraphs of columnists. Claire Trevor is to have one of the principal roles.

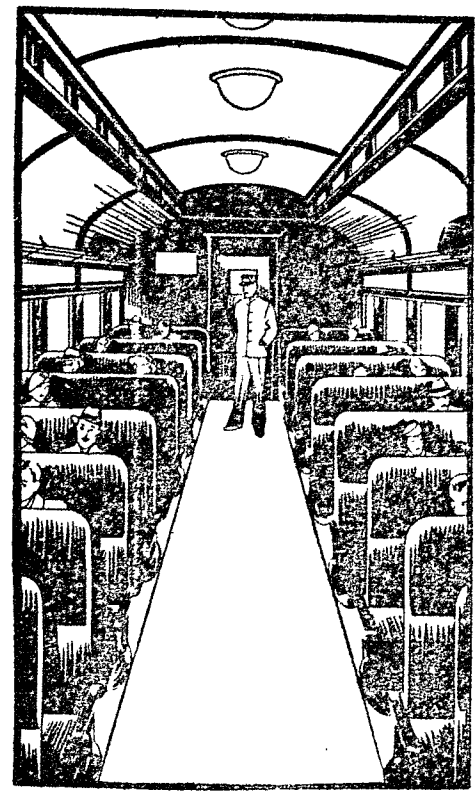

Monogram Pictures scheduled includes "The Avenger," with Ralph Forbes and Adrienne Ames; "Broken Dreams," with Randolph Scott and Martha Sleeper; "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," a musical romance with Buster Crabbe and Mary Carlisle; and "Sixty Fathoms Deep," with Sally O'Neill and Creighton Chaney (son of Lon Chaney.)

"How kind of you," said the girl "to bring me these lovely flowers. They're so lovely and fresh. I believe there is some dew on them yet."

"Yes," stammered the young man in great embarrassment, "but I am going to pay it off tomorrow."

During the first 5 months that the new lowered fares have been in effect on the L. & N. system more than one million one hundred forty thousand people have realized how much more comfortable it is to travel in large roomy coaches and Pullman cars—where every convenience is provided and in which they are safe and will arrive at their destination without delays or fatigue.

They have compared the costs in dollars and cents as well as in comforts provided, and an average of approximately 1200 passengers per day more than the same days last year have returned to train travel by L. & N.

Remember that these rates apply any day, any train, anywhere on the entire L. & N. system, without limitation, and there is no surcharge in Pullmans. Prices have been lowered on famous L. & N. dining service.

SAVE THE SWEET POTATO CROP

With the approach of cold weather it is now time to give some thought to the best method of harvesting the sweet potato crop. Especially is this true this fall since it has been too dry to produce a full growth of vegetables for winter use.

Where the soil is rather expected to be dry, the crop should be dug just before the first hard frost, but where the soil is rather in the fall season the potatoes of the vines will indicate that the crop is not yet mature and ready for digging.

Sweet potato vines are easily injured by frost and the extent of the vines from frozen here is danger of the frozen crop being eaten by the potato and causing them to rot within a short time after harvesting. If the vines have been killed by frost and it is impossible to dig them at once, the vines should be cut away from the sweet potatoes and loose soil thrown over the rows for protection from further cold.

In harvesting or digging the sweet potatoes, extreme care should be practiced to avoid cutting or bruising the potatoes. It has been the common practice of the most successful growers to dig the sweet potatoes when the soil is dry, to carefully sort the potatoes in the field. Do not throw into piles, but pick up each row separately, throwing out all cut, bruised and small stock, and place the marketable stock in crates so as not to bruise or otherwise injure by rough handling which may cause rot or other damage.

The sweet potato requires a dry atmosphere and uniform temperature in storage. Where a large quantity is to be stored, a specially built storage house should be provided. A few for home use may be placed in crates and stored in a well ventilated place. The success in storage depends largely upon the careful handling of the crop at harvest time.

For further information on the storage of sweet potatoes and storage-house construction see Farmers' Bulletin No. 1442, Storage of Sweet Potatoes.

BAY ST. LOUIS, ONCE FRENCH CAPITAL IS CHARMING COAST CITY

tury the United States acquired French Louisiana and also Spanish West Florida, as the Mississippi gulf coast region was then called. A new territory was created and the gulf coast section became a part of the Territory of Mississippi.

New County

A new county was organized by the territorial Legislature of Mississippi, Feb. 5, 1812—a county that stretched along the Bay of St. Louis. It was called Hancock County in honor of John Hancock of Massachusetts, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

The first county seat was at a now defunct town off the seacoast but later Bay St. Louis was made the county seat and so remains to this day.

In my rambles last week I drifted along the beautiful stretch of country known as the Mississippi gulf coast. I crossed the Bay of St. Louis on a handsome highway bridge—a free bridge, thanks to the wisdom of the Mississippi highway department—and entered the portals of Bay St. Louis looking in its silvery sunshine upon the west la k of its shimmering bay.

I drove slowly and enraptured down the winding streets of Bay St. Louis. I half felt my breath. At every turn in the serpentine streets I saw new sights which pleased me. I saw quaint houses, through the portals of which I half expected to see some fine old French dame emerge, I saw the latticed windows painted green—always green—staring at me like the pictures from some old story book. I saw flowers of variegated hues growing in the yards. I saw the tidy but quaint little business establishments of the merchants of Bay St. Louis.

My wife and I entered a restaurant for lunch. What quaint little place it was. It was small. The buxom but most affable proprietress met us at the door and escorted us to seats at a table that was immaculate. And what would I have had? Surely I took French drip coffee—asked for it before our lunch was brought. The coffee was served. It was so black that it looked green and so good that the landlady was asked to refill the cups. Then the lunch. It was nothing unusual home in the past, but I tasted like the dinner spread for some queen—a French queen at that.

Then I stood in the middle of the principal business street of Bay St. Louis. I was perplexed—hypothesized. I did not know which way to turn. I was assembling stories for this newspaper for a dozen years. I usually have no trouble in assembling data at any community I choose to visit. But this town—it was different. Where should I begin.

She Helped Him.

I appealed to the affable secretary of the Bay St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, Mrs. M. J. Jaden. Yes, she could help me. She did help me. But I was in a trance. I scarce had courage to set out on a prosaic journey of assembling data for a story and destroy an environment that was like that of some fairyland. How could I turn my camera upon those quaint old houses? It seemed like sacrilege.

I drove down a beautiful boulevard that stretches along the waterfront. I passed the campus of St. Joseph Academy, a preparatory school for young ladies, and the Sisters of the Roman Catholic Church. Then I passed a double-scurpon vine facing the azure of the ocean in front of me. I passed. That old church, so old and sacred in appearance, held me the heart. A black-robed priest, dressed in the church. That church is known as the Church of Our Lady of the Gulf.

But I must be on my way. I could not permit the attractions around me to hinder me in my work of assembling a story. I walked down the boulevard. I passed a group of stately buildings facing the waterfront. A tall statue of a saint with outstretched arms as if in an attitude of welcome stood in front of the main entrance to that beautiful group of buildings. I was hypnotized again. I boldly entered the portals of that beautiful edifice—entered the doors where thousands of aspiring young men have entered—and met Brother William of St. Stanislaus College, a preparatory school for young men conducted by the Brothers of the Sacred Heart of the Roman Catholic Church.

Brother William is not an old man. But he is a most delightful character. Yes, Brother William was busy. He is always busy. He was teaching a class at the moment. But he took time from his work to be affable and most accommodating. He helped me assemble data on St. Stanislaus College, institution to which he is giving his life. He answered all my questions and made my wife and I feel exactly like we were at home—like a prodigal son and daughter returned to partake of the fatted calf.

Fully Affiliated
St. Stanislaus, one of the older preparatory schools of the State, is a fully affiliated school. Its students enter such universities as Loyola, Tulane, University of Mississippi, Notre Dame, and many others, and make good.

Brother William, having supplied me with more than sufficient data to include in this story, then granted to my wife and I permission to ramble leisurely over the beautiful campus of St. Stanislaus College and to view the buildings, many of which are of recent construction and modern in every way.

If I had enjoyed no other treat while visiting Bay St. Louis that visit I made to St. Stanislaus College would have more than repaid me for the trouble of journeying thence for a story.

Concluding my visit to St. Stanislaus College, I next rambled leisurely all over town. I called at the office of Emile Gex, a prominent Bay St. Louis attorney. He was busy dictating to two stenographers simultaneously. But that did not deter him from being the personification of affability. That's the way with Bay St. Louis' citizens.

Next I called at the office of the editor and publisher of The Sea Coast Echo, brilliantly edited weekly newspaper of Hancock County. I met its delightful and distinguished editor and publisher, Charles G. Moreau. (Yes, nearly everybody at Bay St. Louis has French names.)

I was accorded a genuine "newspaper welcome" to the sanctum sanctorum of that genial editor. And, by the way, Mr. Moreau is not only an editor and publisher by vocation, but by avocation he is a banker—is president of the Merchants Bank & Trust Co., one of the two "strong banks" of Bay St. Louis, the other bank being the Hancock County Bank. But this man's first love is journalism. The Sea Coast Echo is one of the most brilliantly edited and one of the newest weekly newspapers physically published in Mississippi.

Leisurely Over Town
Then I drove leisurely over town—my wife and I. We drank in the scenery of one of the most beautiful old towns in Mississippi. We saw old homes, stained by the touches of time's ruthless fingers—old homes built perhaps by the French. We saw a bower of flowers, trees and shrubs in all the yards.

We drove out into handsome concrete concrete boulevard that extends along the western shore of Bay St. Louis. There we saw other homes. We

WORK AND PLAY AT S. J. A.

SODALITY NEWS.

From the first day of October action, real live action, has been displayed the majority of Sodality. There has been a marked increase in the daily attendance at Mass. Many of the members have shown the real S. S. C. spirit by their faithful daily recital of the Rosary. Of course, there is much room for improvement—especially for those who have been shirking their duty as members of the Sodality.

Five Committees have been organized whose duty will be to take charge of the chief interests of the Sodality. The three officers of the Sodality make up the Publicity Committee.

The chairman with their committees are as follows:

Our Lady's Committee—Eran Le Blanc, chairman; Almas Hauser, Maude Warren, Nina di Benedetto. Eucharistic Committee—Celia T. ledo, chairman; Bernice Johnson, Mildred Mestayer, Kathleen Gordon.

Mission Committee—Jane Jaden, chairman; Elaine Richardson, Margaret Zimmerman, Pearl Raly.

Social Committee—Alma Maxwell, chairman; Lorraine Quintini, Mathilde Maurigi, Imabelle Fahey.

Checking Up.

The first six weeks of the present scholastic year ended Friday. How many of us even remember that we ever made such a thing as "Resolutions?" Some of the letters seem to indicate that we have a very short memory in this respect. "There's no time like the present," so let's give to work right now so as not to have any cause for regret in May.

The new system of grading, A. B. C. D., etc., has caused much excitement. Many are in favor, while others have preference for the former method. But this is true of all innovations.

HONORS FOR FIRST PERIOD.

Seniors—First honors, Alice Camors, second honors, Lois Wolf.

Juniors—First honors, Pearl Raly, second honors, Lorraine Quintini.

saw stately old trees mellow with their weight of years. One old live oak, covered heavily with moss, attracted my attention. It stood apart from the other trees like some old patriarch of the forest. Somehow that old tree attracted me. I stopped my car. I parked on a dirt road and repeated to my wife the lines from the pen of the immortal Joyce Kilmer:

"Poems are made by fools like me,
But only God can make a tree."

There it stood—that hoary old tree—standing so stately and so old, the bank of that bay when D'Arville and his companions visited there more than two centuries ago.

Then I drove out U. S. Highway No. 90 for a distance of about two miles toward New Orleans. At a quaint old gambling place, known as the roadside I paused. I entered the porch and rang a quaint old doorbell. The bell was answered by a delightful lady, Mrs. Albert C. Brown, who accorded us a regal welcome to Brown's scuppernon vineyard, one of the most interesting places in the vicinity of Bay St. Louis.

It was about 75 years ago that William Brown decided that scuppernons might be made a paying proposition in Hancock County. He built the rambling old house and planted a scuppernon vineyard consisting of 23 acres, one of the largest vineyards of its kind in Mississippi.

It was about 22 years ago that William Brown died at a ripe old age and passed his vineyard along to his son, Albert C. Brown. It was the wife of the present owner who accorded my wife and I a regal welcome to her interesting old home.

Not only is that Brown home a famous scuppernon vineyard but it is a museum as well. Mrs. Brown showed us an old rosewood piano that is said to be more than 150 years old. Another piano—a mahogany piano—is "the new piano." It is only about 75 years old. Both pianos are still in good condition. Then there is the marble center table with inlaid onyx top. An old what-not was seen in a corner. It is made of rosewood and is more than 100 years old. Another table with burnt wood top is also interesting. The upholstered chairs remind me of the days of Marie Antoinette and Napoleon.

Alligator 79 years old.

Then Mrs. Brown escorted us to the yard. She pointed to an alligator about six or seven feet long. It seemed not to resist the visit of a newspaper man—washed no publicity. It made a terrifying noise as we approached which instantly prompted me to inspect closely the wire fence to see if it was substantial. This alligator, a female of the species, is 79 years old. Her mate died a few years ago at the ripe old age of much more than 100 years old.

Before we left the interesting and hospitable Brown home, good and accommodating Mrs. Brown treated us to glasses of delicious scuppernon juice. Before prohibition all but destroyed their business the Browns, father and son, made handsome profits selling scuppernon wine which is equal to the fine French champagne.

Since prohibition the profits have been much lessened but the scuppernon juice, unfettered, is still sold to those who desire it. Naturally the Browns are hoping for the abolition of the Eighteenth Amendment to the federal constitution and the legalizing of wines in Mississippi.

Our visit to the hospitable Brown home was a red letter day in our lives. In fact, that entire visit to Bay St. Louis was one long to be remembered. Now as I sit at my desk to write this story I can permit memory to wander back to that delightful visit and even still, I think of Bay St. Louis as some kind of a beautiful fairyland—a sylvan haunt where hospitality, culture, natural charm, artistic accomplishment, and romance are all most enticingly mingled.

ECHOES OF CITY P. T. A. PARADE

Honoring Election of New State President—Launching P. T. A. Membership Drive.

Bay St. Louis beheld one of its most interesting, and colorful parades last Thursday when the local P. T. A. launched its membership drive with an impressive procession through the down town streets. The occasion also honored Mrs. C. C. McDonald, newly elected president of the Mississippi Congress of Parents and Teachers, and celebrated the birthday of the association.

It was a parade resplendent with banners, streamers, music and life. The police department and city commissioners headed the procession, followed by the Municipal Band, playing throughout the march. The Boy Scouts acted as color bearers. They were followed by the county health unit, and P. T. A. officials. The Girl Scouts in their olive green uniforms were a natty troop, with Mrs. A. J. Goldman, scout captain in command. Mrs. Goldman was Grand Marshal of the parade, and to her much credit is due for this most successful event.

R. M. Taylor School
The Taylor School with its unique rhythm band, was a colorful group in red and white, headed by Mrs. W. W. Stockstill.

R. W. Webb School.
The Webb School children carrying banners, and bedecked with green streamers, were in charge of Mrs. F. Wright.

The various grammar grades of the Central School represented the objectives of the school. Each grade wore green and white bows, ties, or caps, and carried colorful posters. They were as follows:

First Grade—Health.

Third Grade—Manners.

Fourth Grade—Characters.

Fifth Grade—Citizenship.

Sixth Grade—The Spic and Span Army.

Seventh Grade—Health.

Eighth Grade—Modern Knights.

High School

The High school classes represented the various school courses, United States History, Algebra, English in Action, Literature, Debate, Commercial Spanish, and Home Economics. The Algebra and English in Action groups were particularly well worked out. The home economics girls lent a rainbow hue to the scene, as they marched by in their cooking aprons of pink, blue, green and orchid.

The prize for the most attractive group was awarded to the second grade, Miss Louvinia Saucier's room. The children wore green hair bows, and ties. They carried beautifully designed posters depicting the various forms of courtesy—smiles, helpfulness, politeness, apology and table manners. The first grade, under Mrs. Celine Ashcraft gave the prize winners a close race for first honors. This grade also wore green bows and streamers, and carried attractive posters.

There was a reviewing stand on the porch of the Red Cross headquarters in Main street. It was attractively decorated with green and white streamers, topped by a shield in green and white with the letters P. T. A. Here were seated Mrs. C. C. McDonald, guest of honor, local ex-president, members of P. T. A. and friends.

When the parade ended at the Central School, Mr. Ingram, who brought up the rear guard, announced a half holiday much to the delight of the pupils. Mayor G. Y. Blaize was responsible for this "beau geste." Moving pictures were taken of the parade and it is planned to show them on Father's Night.

SCHUBERT MUSIC CLUB MEMBERS ENTERTAINED AT J. D. GRACE HOME.

Members of the Schubert Music Club were recently entertained at the home of Mr. John D. Grace and his daughter, Miss Virginia, their home is always a center of music and musical activity and where much talent frequently centers.

For the occasion several chorus numbers were given by club members, and Mrs. Thos. A. Maxwell, whose exquisite and finished voice always delights, gave a number of operatic and other classical selections. Another pleasing feature was the rendition of "songs of yesterday" by Mr. Grace, numbers of another day that never grow old and live in fond memory. An evening of music as this was most engaging and its memory will long linger.

ULYES CUEVAS WEDS AT HATTIESBURG ON WEDNESDAY MORNING.

An interesting event of the week was the marriage of Mr. Ulyses Cuevas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor C. Cuevas, residing in Carroll avenue, to Miss Katie Conn, of Hattiesburg, which took place Wednesday morning of this week in the latter city, Rev. McDonald conducting the ceremony. The attendants were Mr. Joseph Hyland and Miss Bessie Conn. An informal ceremony and breakfast followed the ceremony after which Mr. and Mrs. Cuevas left by motor for a trip to Florida, after which they will return to Bay St. Louis and make their home under the parental Cuevas roof.

Mr. Cuevas, is a well-known and successful young business man of this city. He is a graduate of St. Stanislaus College and later attended the University of Florida at Gainesville in that state.

The bride visited this city from time to time and is no stranger here. She is an attractive and accomplished young woman and will prove an acquisition to the community.

Night Blooming Cereus Blooms at Residence Of Mrs. Kate Conner

A number of neighbors and other friends assembled at the residence of Mrs. Kate Conner, Union street, to view the gradual opening of seven perfect blossoms on one plant of a night blooming cereus, a rare species of the cacti family. The flowers, noted for their size and attractive wax-like appearance and the fragrance as well which permeated the atmosphere for some distance around.

The plant has been tenderly cared for by Mrs. Conner, a lover and successful grower of flowers, and her attention and tender solicitation is rewarded accordingly as above.

HALLOWE'EN BENEFIT PARTY FOR P. T. A. AT NITE CLUB, OCTOBER 31

There will be a real old-fashioned Halloween Party with ghosts, witches, fortune-telling, apples to bob for and tables of good things to eat, at the Nite Club, October 31st at Uncle Charlie's Nite Club. The party will be sponsored by the Parent-Teacher Associations of Hancock County and each unit will be in charge of one feature of the party. All children and "grown-up" children are invited and admission for everyone will be ten cents.

Mrs. Jas. A. Evans is the chairman and says the doors will be open at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening. To be sure there is no misapprehension the Halloween dance given by "Uncle Charlie" will be on Saturday night, October 28th but the P. T. A. Halloween Party will be on Halloween night, Tuesday, October 31st. Already, numbers from Lakeshore, Logtown, Waveland and elsewhere in the county are planning to join with Taylor and Conner at Bay St. Louis, in celebrating with this county wide party.

Lakeshore P. T. A. Activities.

The lady members of Gulfview P. T. A. staged a very comical black-face entertainment at the school on Friday night, October 13th. It was strictly a feminine affair. The attendance was extra good, judging from the applause given everyone present received his money's worth. The program consisted of jokes, dances, and a play entitled "Mrs. Black's Pink Tea." Proceeds of the concert went to the local P. T. A. treasury.

Mrs. L. Wadsworth, president of Gulfview P. T. A. called a meeting of the association Friday, October 20, in observance of P. T. A. Week. Various matters were discussed. The attendance was good.

The teachers and pupils of Gulfview school are very glad to see Beulah Chouest back in school after several weeks of illness, which confined her to her home.

The girls of Gulfview school are practicing basketball everyday and will soon be ready to challenge other schools for games. This will be the girls' first opportunity to play in match games with other schools.

CARD OF THANKS.

The Fathers and students of St. Augustine's Seminary wish to express their heartfelt thanks to the good fellow citizens of Bay St. Louis and Pass Christian who have shown so genuine sympathy at the sad loss of one of our students who drowned in the Gulf off the west beach in Pass Christian. Sincerely regretting not to be able to show our appreciation in a more conspicuous way, we wish at least to say we are grateful to those self-sacrificing men from both Pass Christian and Bay St. Louis who spent so much time searching for the body of the student the evening and night after the drowning and the following days. Also we wish to thank Miss Del Bondio, Miss Bertrand, and Miss Abbley, of "Blue Heaven," for their kindness and cooperation, and ready aid extended all the while the search was going on.
